

Attachment 1:	Job Description
Title of Position:	Research Assistant
Date of job description:	25th May 2022
Reporting to:	Senior Research officer
Job Summary: The Research Assistant will work with the Senior Research Officer to coordinate and conduct Group Antenatal Care (G-ANC) research study activities including health facility data collection through data abstraction and survey interviewing for quantitative data. Recruitment, screening for focus- group discussions and key informant interviews data collection from qualitative research study participants according to the study protocol and standard operating procedures.
Roles and responsibilities › Coordinates and manages qualitative and quantitative data collection calendar for Group Antenatal Care (GANC) study as provided by Senior Research Officer. › Collect baseline data from the Antenatal Clinic registers at the respective health facilities using electronic device › Liaise with health facility managers to schedule for monthly data collection at the specific health facilities; data abstraction from the GANC cohort registers › Conduct monthly meeting observation of GANC groups and collect monitoring data on facility readiness and continuous requirements in implementing GANC › Recruit and screen survey participants at the health facilities with assistance of health workers for conducting surveys and ensure that verbal/oral consent is obtained from all participants before conducting interviews. › Collect data from survey participants electronically on a monthly basis at all selected study health facilities › Participate in monthly survey data collection from participant at the health facilities › Conduct focus group discussions (FGDs) and Key Informant Interviews (KIIs) at midline and end line of the study while ensuring data accuracy and completeness › Transcribing interview audios from Key Informant Interviews (KIIs) and focus group discussions (FGDs) and translating data where necessary › Adhere/comply with policies on ethical conduct of research and human subject's protection as provided in the study protocol › Ensure confidentiality of information and eliminate any apprehensions and fears from the mind of the study subject. › Participating in the data coding, analysis, and generation of analytical memos from qualitative data collected › Provide weekly reports on the data collection progress and regularly communicate with the senior research officer to bring to their attention any issue that may compromise the study › Ensures that all project financial expenditure are accurately accounted for, and timely financial report and liquidation submitted to the project coordinator › Participate in the preparation of detailed progress report and participate in weekly meetings of the study team › Assist in maintaining repository of all project materials and information from the quantitative and qualitative research activities › Participate in the documentation of project experiences and lessons learnt during implementation of GANC study › Perform such tasks as assigned by the Senior Research Officer and PI.
Specific Requirements
Qualifications › Degree in a relevant healthcare discipline including social sciences or equivalent › Minimum 2 years' experience in the collection and analysis of qualitative data (participant & non participant observation, focus group discussions, in-depth interviews, and key informant interviews)

- › Experience in collection of quantitative data using electronic devices
- › Experience setting up and managing virtual meetings on platforms such as zoom, Microsoft teams

Competencies

- › Excellent communication and interpersonal skills
- › Ability to work independently and effectively
- › Familiarity with electronic data collection tools is an added advantage
- › Ability to manage multiple activities and achieving set deadlines
- › Strong attention to details and writing skills that should include the ability to develop comprehensive notes during qualitative data collection and analysis